Quidnic-Windham Company to Resume
 Running, With Older Employees First.

The news that the plant of the Quidnic-Windham Company, located in this city, will start up again after a long period of idleness, is welcomed by everyone in the city. The news was given out after a meeting of the local stockholders held here Monday morning, at which C. H. Newell of Pawtucket, temporary receiver of the company, was present and explained the proposition of reorganization. It is not expected that the plant here, which employs 380 hands when running on full time, will start with that number, but it will start running on the first of December, a week from today, from eight in the morning until four or four thirty in the afternoon, probably, and preference will be given to the older workmen at the start. As soon as conditions warrant, this schedule will be increased. The mill in Rhode Island will not start until a couple of weeks later, in all probability.

 A majority of the Willimantic stockholders Monday agreed to the plan for reorganization, which includes the issuance of bonds covered by a mortgage of $750,000, to take care of the floating indebtedness of $600,000, pay on the existing mortgage on the Willimantic plant, and furnish a little running capital. In the meantime the receiver will continue to operate the plants until the negotiations are concluded.
